Our philosophy is that everyone can learn from studying and riding with as many clinicians as you can. All clinicians basically teach the same techniques but utilize different terms. The difference in all clinicians is their personalities, that is why we continue to observe all clinicians we can in order to evaluate if there is a better way to teach the horse. This, the pursuit for more knowledge, is what we feel is the difference between a horseman and a horse trainer. We strive to teach horse owners that they can teach their horse to do anything they want. All horses, from horses ridden just for fun, to the highly competitive horse must have a good foundation. We feel that if the owner is not in direct participation in the training then they will not be able to obtain the performance they are looking for. We try to give our clients what they need for a Safe and Fun experience, without a lot of information that they will never use.

- This class is for those of you that want a steadier horse.
- We are assuming that your horse has a basic amount of training and that you and your horse have some saddle time behind you.
- There will be time spent on the ground as well as saddle.
- Eric will show you how to properly introduce your horse to scary objects.
- How to build his confidence.
- Reward his bravery.
- How to keep him under control when he does spook.
- How to "Flow with the Life of Your Horse".
- He needs to know that, at times, you are willing to leave with him, so that he does not decide to leave without you.
- And we will show you how to turn their leaving into turning and staying.

Bringing a helmet for program is strongly recommended and are REQUIRED for youth participants
